In chess, there is a general consensus among players and theorists that the player who makes the first move (White) has an inherent advantage. Since 1851, compiled statistics support this view; White consistently wins slightly more often than Black, usually scoring between 52 and 56 percent.

The debate of the best first move is not a new. Historically it is considered that the first move 1.e2-e4 is more aggressive and other moves especially the 1. Nf3 are more quiet and leading to the positional game. This is also reflected in the opening books, the openings after 1.e4 are called open games and after.1d4 we find the closed openings.

There are 20 possible first moves for white, but time and practice has whittled these down to a shortlist of seven or eight that are any good. The best starting moves are 1. d4, 1. e4, 1. c4 and 1. Nf3. Behind these are a second tier of decent starting moves which are sometimes played, and these include 1. g3, 1. b3, 1. f4 and 1. Nc3. So that's eight possible moves, which is still a lot to choose between.

The player with the white pieces always moves first. Therefore, players generally decide who will get to be white by chance or luck such as flipping a coin or having one player guess the color of the hidden pawn in the other player's hand. White then makes a move, followed by black, then white again, then black and so on until the end of the game.

1.e4 is the most common opening move in chess. One of the key ideas of this move is to control the center quickly with the pawn which is placed in the center by the first move, also liberating White's light-squared bishop as well as the White Queen. White can follow up by playing Nf3 and moving his bishop to the dangerous c4 square.

Move your King Pawn forward to e4. In both of these methods the key piece for you is your Queen. The Queen is the piece that you are going to use to achieve the checkmate, so your first move should be to open up space for the Queen to move diagonally. Moving the King Pawn forward two spaces to square e4 achieves this (e4).
